

Issue of "Education for Sustainable Development" (ESD) become the main topic from UN to promote the sustainability through education for next ten years.

Not mean to act as a teacher to anybody, this module introduce the ESD issue with easy reading sentences. the target reader are the teachers and other educators.

It contains mostly about the partisipative learning methods. The educators become the facilitator, give chances to the students to involve on the learning activity as many as possible.

The module consists of three parts, first is a famous illustration titled "If the World were a Village of 100 People" , written by Ikeda Kayoko. This illustration is a key to open our mind and bring us to the issue. The second part is the list of term which are usually used in the issue of ESD. And the last part is the compilation of methods that can be used by the educators inside or outside the classroom to raise the critical thinking from the students.